Loading the heavier UTVs into a truck or onto a flatbed trailer with the lighter and shorter ATV ramps can always present a problem or be unsafe. Longer ramps are the safest but can be cumbersome to handle. Strong folding ones are the best to have.

THE BOTTOM LINE

When we first received these ramps, we couldn't believe the quality and construction of the ramps. These really are Big Boys. They fold together for transport with no problem, and when opened, the angle on the bottom and top of the ramps make bump-free loading. Strong straps on each ramp hold it tight up against your truck or trailer.

The ramps come with a set of four brackets that will tie the two ramps together for loading ATVs, small tractors, or other pneumatic wheeled equipment. Ramp dimensions are 10 feet long by 19" wide ramps with heavy-duty hinges for folding. The surface of the ramp system is made up of serrated crossbars for traction with wet or muddy tires. These ramps can take up to 2500 lbs, are constructed in the USA, and include a 5-year manufacturers warranty.

If you notice in the photo our truck is shown without a tailgate. Purpose being we were loading a RZR and our old ramps failed slamming the front end onto the tailgate and total destroying it. After receiving the Big Boy ramps we noticed that they do not flex even with a hefty Ranger HD. While these ramps are on the heavy side, we have the peace of mind that they will hold up to our constant loading and unloading of various UTVs for years to come.
